Representation.

Congress has again assembled, and no sooner is an organization effected than the radicals and fanatics begin anew their work of further disregarding the plain proviof further disregarding the plain provisions of the Constitution either to accomplish some new acheme, or to avert some dreaded consequences of their own previsors work. The blacks of the South made received by the war, are now classed with those "free persons" mentioned in Section 2 of the first article of the Constitution, and are included in the ratio of representation provided for by this section.

The Abolitonists now sees that by this rule, the Southern States become entitled to an additional representation of tweive members in the House of Representatives of the constitution of tweive members in the House of Representatives of the constitution of tweive members in the House of Representatives.

members in the House of Representatives over that of any former Congress. Through fear that those States may yet hold the balance of power, they now seek to change this rule by a law making the representation to depend on the number of voters, and not upon the number of "free persons" and not upon the number of number found in each and every State within the Union. The language of the Constitution is-Representatives and direct taxes, shall be apportioned among the several States included within the Union, according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined, by adding to the whole number of free persons including those bound to service for a term of years, and excluding Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other

According to this rule, prescribed by the supreme law of the land," no law enacted by this Congress can legally prevent the Southern States from having this additional representation, which may fairly be said to have been forced upon them through the abolition of slavery in those States. Either this, or they must be held, as not being "included within this Union," and thus they accomplish all they struggled for through a concession of their enemies in the late civil

The language of the Constitution is too plain to be misapprehended, and gives the only rule by which the number of Representatives in Congress can be determined

It is truly gratifying to every true lover of constitutional liberty to learn from the President himself, that he "takes the conthat instrument by its authors, and cotemporaries as the best exposition of its true intent and meaning; as it indicates a speedy return to the old land marks which characterized the haloyion days of our Republic in view of recent events we may anticl pate the rising morn, and feel that the true doctrines of our government which have recently been crushed to earth, by the rule of wicked fanaticism will rise again, to P

A Rumor.

On the 7th inst., according to the correspondent of the Eventum's Bureau.

It requires the assent of three-fourths of the States to ratify an amendment to the Frederial Constitution. The radicals are argued ing the Southern States to act in their capacity as such, in order to carry the Constitutional Amendment. White thus recognizing their Statehood, they refuse to allow their members to take seats in Congress. They are States along the Southern States in Congress? They are States for Abelition purposes but for no other. If, according to the Seward theory, the Southern States are only to secure the Constitution of the United States 2—Ohio Regice.

The "lobby" is mustering in great strength in Washington, and some grand assaults upon the public treasury are concocting. The end of the war has not put an end to many of the worst enemies of the Federal Government. The immense appropriations of the past five years have created an appetite for plunder which can money continues to be printed and issued from the Treasury Department it is not probable that the sneaking agents of the "shouldy" cormorants who infest the capital will feel inclined to abandon their schemes.

The loose morality which pervades every part of the country gives encouragement.

The executive documents are full of contrasts—Stanton's vulgarity, as revealed in his report, between the calm dignity of the Possiblent's Message and the soldierty moderation of General Gram's letter to the War Department. This modern Carnot, as his admirers call him, and we doubt not he would have been a regicide if he had had a chance, seems unable to control the evil passions of his nature; and now, when success has crowned the Federal cause, and his enemies lie prostrate before him, he is
